We have completed our investigation of your dispute request. The following pages contain details about the information that you disputed and the results of our investigation.

There are a few things to know about the credit report dispute process:

If we were able to make changes to your credit report based on the information you provided, we have done so. Otherwise, we contacted the company reporting the disputed information to Equifax so that they could further research your dispute.

When we contacted the reporting company to research your dispute:

- We requested that the reporting company verify the accuracy of the information you disputed;
- We provided them with any relevant information and supporting documentation you provided us with the dispute to consider as part of their research; and
- We requested that they send Equifax a response to your dispute and update their records and systems, as necessary.

Reading your dispute result:

- We have provided information about each item that you disputed, including how it currently appears on your Equifax credit report.
- The results of your dispute are specific to each item that you disputed and may be different. For each item, we either confirmed that the disputed item is either reporting correctly, updated information about the item, or removed the item from your credit report.
- Where it is available, we have provided the payment history for disputed credit accounts. The below legend provides information about how to read the payment history status of the account in each month.

What should I do if I do not agree with the dispute results?

You have rights:

- You have the right to add a statement of up to 100 words to your credit report to provide more information on an item you disagree with or would like to provide details on. A consumer statement is visible to lenders and other third parties who access your Equifax credit report; it will not affect your credit score. You can add, edit or delete your consumer statement on your Equifax credit report for free and at any time. By adding a consumer statement, you expressly consent to include this information in every credit report we issue about you.
- Or, if you have new or additional evidence of the inaccuracy, you may re-file your dispute by visiting our website www.equifax.com/personal/disputes, mailing your documents to Equifax, P.O. Box 740256, Atlanta, GA 30374-0256, or contact us by calling us at 888-EQUIFAX (888-378-4329).
- You may contact the company that reports the information to us and dispute it directly with them. If you would like written proof about your accounts (such as the original agreement), please contact your creditors directly.
- You may contact the Consumer Financial Protection Bureau or your State Attorney General's office about your issue or complaint against Equifax or the company reporting the information.

Additional information about your rights:

- If the reinvestigation results in the deletion of disputed information, or you submit a consumer statement, you have the right to request that we send your revised credit file to any company specifically designated by you that received your credit report in the past six months (twelve months for Maryland, New Jersey and New York residents) for any purpose or in the past two years for employment purposes.
- You may request a description of the procedure used to determine the accuracy and completeness of the information, including the business name and address of the furnisher of information contacted, and if reasonably available the telephone number. For frequently asked questions about your credit report and the dispute process, please visit Equifax at https://www.equifax.com/personal/help/disputes/.
